Baltimore's Inner Harbor makes city unique

The Inner Harbor, combined with Baltimore's easy accessibility, makes the city unique. Also known as Charm City, Baltimore will be rolling out the red carpet for EMLF members during the 23rd Annual Institute.

A city that has something for everyone, Baltimore offers history and culture as well as some of the greatest sports teams playing in the most breathtaking stadiums in the world.

After spending time there, you are sure to fall in love with Charm City. Downtown Baltimore's renaissance began in 1959 with the development of the 33-acre Charles Center urban renewal program. The success of the $200 million project initiated the city's redevelopment of the 240-acre Inner Harbor program.

What most people don't realize is that most sites and neighborhoods are within walking distance of each other, and this makes Charm City an ideal place for business as well as pleasure.

The best view of the city is from the top of Federal Hill on the south side of the Inner Harbor. The surrounding neighborhood has a variety of boutiques and restaurants and one of the city's most popular markets.

Mount Vernon, the cultural center of the city, was the address for the rich and famous during the 18th and 19th centuries. Their legacies include the first architectural monument to George Washington; Peabody Conservatory of Music; The Walters Art Gallery; and the Basilica of the National Shrine of the Assumption, the first Roman Catholic cathedral in the United States.

And don't forget about Canton to the east. There you will find one of the city's hottest neighborhoods, where old factories have been converted into a thriving retail and entertainment hub.

Baltimore is a dynamic city that continues to evolve while holding on to its maritime heritage. Since 1600, Baltimore waterways have been a passage for ships carrying commercial cargo and new citizens. It lies further west than any other major Atlantic port, a point that endeared its harbors to shippers. Baltimore now ranks fourth among United States ports for container cargo on the East Coast. Forty million tons of cargo pass through the port of Baltimore every year.

And EMLF members are fortunate to be in Baltimore while two wonderful art exhibits are available: Reflections of Sea and Light: Paintings and Watercolors of J.M.W. Turner from the Tate, showing at The Baltimore Museum of Art, and The Age of Impressionism: European Masterpieces from Ordrupgaard, Copenhagen, available for viewing at The Walters Art Museum.

There's more to Baltimore than seen at first glance. Charming historic neighborhoods surround the Inner Harbor, each offering their own character, history and cuisine.

Baltimore has restaurants to satisfy nearly every craving. Dining options include elegant gourmet cuisine, ethnic foods from around the world and plenty of fresh seafood from Maryland's Chesapeake Bay. Baltimore is known for its fabulous crabs, and dining at one of the city's many seafood restaurants or crab houses is a must for all who visit.

Little Italy is a pasta lover's paradise with outdoor movies on summer weekends, festivals of San Gabriel and St. Anthony, and two bocce ball courts. Fells Point is the oldest section of Baltimore and still has the feel of an old English neighborhood with cobblestone streets, unique shops and plentiful pubs and restaurants.

And, there's Inner Harbor East, a bustling waterfront stop with its own attractions, retail shops, restaurants and two new hotels on the way.

At this year's Annual Institute, there will be a hosted reception at the Renaissance Harbor Hotel Monday evening, followed by a dine-around. Take advantage of all that Baltimore has to offer — and please your palate at the same time by joining a dine-around group.
