Christopher L. Callas

Chris Callas, a Member in Jackson Kelly's Business Law department, co-chairs the Firm's public utilities practice group. Mr. Callas' legal focus is utility regulation. He represents investor-owned electric, gas, and water utilities before the Public Service Commission of West Virginia in certificate applications, general rate cases, fuel/purchased power proceedings, purchased gas adjustment filings, and a wide range of regulatory consent cases, including utility acquisitions and divestitures. Of particular note is Mr. Callas' work on the certification of interstate high voltage transmission lines, projects in which he has worked closely with PJM Interconnection on regional transmission reliability issues. He also consults on the regulatory aspects of utility financings, ranging from debt and equity issuances to utility holding company IPOs and ratepayer obligation charge financings.

Mr. Callas' expertise also extends to merchant generation projects. Mr. Callas has been a leader in the siting and development of these facilities in West Virginia, both as regulatory counsel and as coordinator of the Firm's other project development services. Wind energy is a particular area of expertise: Mr. Callas has served as lead counsel on several wind energy projects before the Commission, and has advised both landowners and lenders on others. In addition to siting issues, Mr. Callas frequently advises project developers and owners on project financing concerns and siting certificate transfer questions.

Mr. Callas has considerable legislative experience, having represented governmental and private clients in both legislative drafting and lobbying matters. Mr. Callas was co-author of legislation to streamline the exempt wholesale generator siting process after the Supreme Court of Appeals' ACT v. PSC decision, a case in which he was lead counsel for the project developer. Mr. Callas was also the primary author of the environmental securitization legislation enacted by the West Virginia Legislature in 2005; subsequently he helped secure regulatory approvals under that statute for the nation's first issuance of securitization bonds for environmental control facilities

Mr. Callas is a summa cum laude graduate of Washington & Lee University and a 1992 graduate of Vanderbilt University School of Law. He has been listed in Best Lawyers in America since 2003. He is a member of the Section of Public Utility, Communications and Transportation Law of the American Bar Association, and has been active in the West Virginia Wind Energy Working Group and the West Virginia Chamber of Commerce's Energy Committee. His community activities include service on the Executive Committee and Board of Directors of the United Way of Central West Virginia.

Allyn G. Turner

Allyn G. Turner is a member of Spilman Thomas & Battle, PLLC and practices in the Charleston, West Virginia office. Her primary area of practice is environmental law from both the legal and regulatory perspectives.

Ms. Turner's past work with regulatory agencies has contributed to her broad knowledge of environmental issues. As Director of the West Virginia Department of Environmental Protection's Division of Water and Waste Management, she managed the NPDES permitting, the TMDL/impaired waters program, the Clean Water Act State Revolving Fund, 401 water quality certification, groundwater, and non-point source water programs, solid and hazardous waste programs, and numerous other regulatory and non-regulatory water and waste programs. She was one of two state representatives with the United States Environmental Protection Agency's Office of Water in Washington, D.C. in the development of national water program goals and targets for EPA's national strategic plan. Her work with the Division of Water and Waste Management also resulted in extensive involvement in water quality and quantity issues faced by the coal industry. She also served as the Managing Attorney for the DEP's Office of Legal Services, handling numerous administrative appeals, civil actions, and other legal proceedings.

She has presented at national meetings of Association of State and Interstate Water Pollution Control Administrators (ASIWPCA), Association of State Drinking Water Administrators (ASDWA), and Ground Water Protection Council (2003) and has been a frequent speaker in West Virginia on environmental issues. During legislative interim and session meetings, Ms. Turner is the DEP representative for water issues.

Ms. Turner received her J.D. in 1990 from the Wake Forest University School of Law. She received her B.A. in Environmental Sciences from the University of Virginia.

Ms. Turner is admitted to practice in United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit, United States District Courts for the Northern and Southern Districts of West Virginia, and the West Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals.

Thomas S. West

Thomas S. West is recognized for his distinguished accomplishments in the oil and gas and environmental fields by the Best Lawyers in America®, Super Lawyers, and Strathmore's Who's Who. Super Lawyers recently ran a feature article on Tom West (http://www.westfirmlaw.com/pdf/West_NUSL09_e-print.pdf). Since founding The West Firm in 2006, Tom and his firm have established a reputation as the premier firm representing the oil and gas industry in New York State. Tom is a graduate of Albany Law School and St. Lawrence University.

Tom West regularly represents clients on a broad range of environmental matters involving permitting, compliance, civil and administrative enforcement, and criminal defense. His permitting experience includes facilities involved with manufacturing, hazardous waste treatment, storage, and disposal, lightweight aggregate production, wind power generation, traditional power generation, cement production, mining operations, oil and gas exploration and development, gas pipeline siting, solid waste disposal, water supply and low-level radioactive waste storage. Tom also represents pesticide manufacturers, distributors, and applicators on a variety of regulatory and legislative issues. This practice requires him to appear before a variety of state, federal and municipal agencies involved with the permitting and licensing of facilities and projects. He has extensive experience with the New York State Environmental Quality Review Act and other state and federal environmental programs that apply to project permitting and siting. Often, he is involved with regulatory issues that require a multidisciplinary approach.
